

Massachusetts State Police brighten Gabby's day as she fights courageous battle against Neuroblastoma

"Massachusetts State Police Trooper Pat McNamara, paid a birthday visit to Gabby. Gabby has been fighting a courageous battle against Neuroblastoma. Gabby's dad, Mike, is a trainee at the State Police Academy's 85th Recruit Training Troop and has his hands full with the live in academy in New Braintree.

In hopes of lightening Gabby's spirits, show support for a potential new member, VP McNamara decided to bring some gifts, courtesy of State Police Association of Massachusetts. Gabby's infectious smile tells us all we need to know; she's a fighter and a strong and loving child. We at SPAM wish Gabby, her family, and the trainee, Mike, the best of luck in the coming weeks and years.

While not officially part of the MSP or SPAM yet, we are here to support the Atton family as they battle this terrible disease. We are all behind you Gabby, stay strong, and we are glad Trooper McNamara stopped by to hopefully brighten your day.

There is an active GoFundMe campaign to assist the Atton family offset the costs associated with battling this terrible disease. If you can, please help them and ease the burden. <https://www.gofundme.com/f/gabbys-fight-to-beat-cancer>

You can find more information on Gabby's battle on her Facebook page, <https://www.facebook.com/GabbyAttonStrong/>

#GabbyStrong"

